OPINION

Russia's Trade Geopolitics

BY SHABAN MURATI

One of the forms and fields of geopolitical clash between the interests of the EU and Russian ones are each party's trade relations with third countries in Central Europe and Central Asia, which were formerly part of the Soviet communist federation.

There is an irritation caused by Russia's geopolitical ambitions to regain dominance in the geographical area of the former Soviet Union, which Moscow considers its natural sphere of influence. Russian ambitions collide with the interests and policies of some countries that have emerged from the former Soviet Union.
